

WOMAD, the World Of Music, Arts & Dance

One of the most significant events on the South Australian arts calendar, WOMADelaide is a three-day day world music, arts and dance festival held in Adelaide's Botanic Park.

It was held every two years until confirmation in mid-2002 by the South Australian Premier and Minister for the Arts, Mike Rann, that it had been secured as an annual event 2009. The 10th anniversary festival was held in 2003 and in 2004 the festival was part of the Adelaide Festival of Arts program, as it had been when it began in 1992.

In 2004 WOMADelaide attracted a record 70,000 attendances (with more than 40% from interstate and overseas) and featured 30 performance groups from 20 countries.

International groups in 2004 included Youssou N'Dour (Senegal), Abdullah Ibrahim Trio (South Africa), Gilberto Gil (Brazil), Savina Yannatou (Greece), Oki Kano & the Far East Band (Japan) and Zakir Hussein (India). Australians include Dirty Lucy, the Cat Empire, Mark Atkins, Monsieur Camembert and Yilila.

Past artists have included Peter Gabriel (UK), Ernest Ranglin (Jamaica), Los de Abajo (Mexico), Toto La Momposina (Colombia), Baaba Maal (Senegal), the Drummers of Burundi, Youssou N'Dour (Senegal), Sheila Chandra (India/UK), Guo Ye and Guo Yi (China), Christine Anu (Australia - Torres Strait), Fun Da Mental (UK/Pakistan), Justin Vali Trio (Madagascar), Radio Tarifa (Spain), Salif Keita (Mali), Joji Hirota (Japan), Shooglenifty (Scotland) and the late, great Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan (Pakistan).

WOMADelaide appeals to an audience that encompasses almost all ages and backgrounds; its uniquely friendly ambience and message of cultural discovery and understanding makes it one of the nation's most popular and successful festivals.

Set in the magnificent inner-city Botanic Park, the action on six outdoor stages comprises performances and workshop activities and is complemented by a strong visual arts program, a roving artists program, KidZone, over 100 international food, arts, crafts and display stalls and three bars. The evenings are balmy and each artist is an exotic delight; many of them are number one in the charts in their own countries but yet to be discovered here. Night owls can go to WoZone, the WOMADelaide club, introduced in 1999, which runs on the Fri and Sat night from 11pm til late. In 2004 it was held at the Adelaide Festival of Arts' Universal Playground club on the Torrens Parade Grounds and featured Salmonella Dub (NZ) and DJ Russ Jones (Future World Funk, UK), amongst others.

The festival highlights program is released in early November the year prior to the festival, with the full program including who's on when being released in mid January. Weekend tickets are on sale from November and weekend, night only, and day+night tickets go on sale from January.

FAQs

What is the estimated economic gain that WOMADelaide brings into the Adelaide community each year?

A survey carried out by the SA Tourism Commission at the 2001 festival indicated that 34% of the audience came from outside Adelaide. The expenditure in SA (excluding festival ticket cost) is approx $350+ per person which, when the usual tourism multipliers are applied, means that the expenditure flowing through the community/total economic impact of the festival is somewhere in the range of $5-6million.

What type of event would WOMADelaide be classified as by the Adelaide community?

It is a 'major event'.

What is Adelaide's typical tourism season?

Summertime, from December to March.

Has WOMADelaide been a catalyst for any development of facilities or other events?

WoZone (the nightclub started at the 1999 festival) and the workshops (1) run by Carclew for 5-16 year olds on site; (2) led by WOMADelaide artists for adults on site and (3) led by WOMADelaide artists in advance for schoolchildren in association with the Adelaide Festival Centre Education Program are part of the constantly-developing WOMADelaide program.

Angus Watt's silk flag installation at the 2001 festival was the result of an extensive crossover project in development since 1999 with the Anangu Pitjantjatjara community in far north South Australia and another for the Melbourne Museum in 2000.

The festival opens up business opportunities for APA (as the event manager/producer), for the artists (who have the opportunity to develop collaborative works with other artists), for the artists' record labels/companies and management, for the stallholders (catering, crafts, information), for the media who are represented there, for the city and its restaurants/tourist attractions ... everyone benefits.

Is there any community involvement/volunteer work in the organisation, planning and or running of the festival?

The event is a community event and is highly-anticipated and embraced as such (the audience grows each festival). We work closely with the Adelaide City Council to achieve this and conduct a major marketing campaign to assist this. The administration, marketing and technical staff are paid, some tertiary students do secondments/placements for the festival to gain experience eg AIT, NIDA, VCA, Flinders University Cultural Tourism, Adelaide Hospitality School.

Until 2001 the only volunteers used were the artist 'minders' - about 15 of them – who look after the visiting interstate and international groups while they're here. They are responsible, trusted arts industry colleagues who know the festival and Adelaide well and who usually speak a second language.

In 2001, in celebration of the United Nations International Year of Volunteers, 18 volunteers operated the festival's first ever information booth in Botanic Park. In 2004 this expanded to about 80 volunteers. Volunteers now work across many areas of the festival; merchandising, specials projects, visual arts etc.

How does the festival represent and respect indigenous culture?

WOMADelaide has always presented a strong program of Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islander (ATSI) artists. Since 1992 it has featured 31 ATSI artists/groups at the 10 festivals/events it has presented; including interstate artists Mark Atkins, Waak Waak Jungi, Kerriane Cox, Archie Roach, Bangarra Dance Theatre, Christine Anu, Coloured Stone, Jimmy Little, Kev Carmody, the Mornington Island Dancers, Ruby Hunter, Stiff Gins and Yothu Yindi.

Statewide, the 2001 festival poster artwork was by the Aboriginal woman artist Inawintji Williamson from the Anangu Pitjantjatjara (AP) lands in the north of South Australia. It was commissioned by the then Marketing Director for use on all of the festival's promotional materials. A group of artists from a number of AP communities travelled to the 2001 festival to present visual arts workshops. Additionally, the British visual artist/flagmaker Angus Watt did a 6week residency in the AP lands in mid 2000; Angus and the local artists produced a number of stunning handpainted silk flags and banners that were displayed at the 2001 festival and then taken back to the AP lands. A different group of women from other AP communities were invited to the 2003 festival as visual artists, and a number of them also performed a traditional 'inma' (women's ceremony/dance).

The local Kurna community/culture has been becoming more involved each festival. At the 99, 01, 03 and 04 festivals, an official 'Kurna Welcome' has happened as the first thing on stage 1 on the opening night of WOMADelaide. Additionally, in 99, in association with Tandanya, the National Aboriginal Cultural Institute, an Kurna Welcome for Artists was held the night before the festival opened.

At all festivals since 99, a local Kurna group (Paitya Dance Group) has done dance/storytelling workshops for children in KidZone. At all festivals since 99, a number of free weekend festival passes have been provided to Kurna community Elders.

In 2003 the Kurna Welcome - traditionally one or two Elders doing a bilingual welcome - was lengthened into a 10minute performance with six performers. In 2004 this grew to a 20minute performance featuring nine performers. The 2005 program will include a Kurna Welcome for Artists at Tandanya the night before the festival opens, a Kurna Welcome on Stage 1 on the opening night of the festival and a 'wodoli knowledge house' hosted by young people and Elders from the Kurna community. It will also feature KidZone performances/workshops linked to the 'Blak Nite program produced by Carclew Youth Arts Centre, Come Out and Tandanya and, finally, a Kurna 'information sheet' will be included in the artist kits distributed to over 300 artists upon arrival.

How do sponsors contribute the festival?

It's a highly complex arrangement, by way of donations of products, venues, services and/or cash. We are unable to disclose individual details however Ozemail in 2001 was the largest corporate cash sponsor the festival had attracted. United Water was a major sponsor of the 2003 and 2004 festivals and is confirmed for 2005. Amnesty International Australia was the presenting partner of the 2004 festival.

Aside from the major (logo identified) sponsors seen on WOMADelaide printed materials, a number of smaller companies provide a variety of in-kind services and discounts. We are unable to disclose details however new potential sponsors are approached for each festival - the key sponsors can change few years however APA seeks to 'sign up' sponsors for a period of three years.

Is there an organiser / organising group for each festival - UK, New Zealand, Singapore, etc.? Is there a global governing body which has control over all of the festivals?

WOMAD Ltd in the UK is effectively the presenter of all WOMAD festivals around the world (see www.womad.org for more information). They do not event manage or 'control' every component of each festival (there are approx seven festivals each year), but work with local production organisations. APA is the producer for the Adelaide event and there are others for Italy, Spain, Greece, Singapore etc. In a couple of cases the festivals are not ticketed because the local government fully funds the event, and it is free to the public.

How is WOMADelaide marketed? Are there specific target markets? What type of advertising and promotion happens on TV and in the print media?

It's a long term, complex strategy that includes direct mail, publicity campaigns, paid advertising (print and electronic) campaigns, promotions (eg competitions), free street postcards, street postering, an extensive web site and cross-promotions (e.g. with Festival Records, sponsors) etc.

Specific target markets include music (world, blues, folk etc) / arts / festival / ethnic / youth audiences. For WoZone it's clubbers, for the workshops it's musicians and music students (from primary thru to tertiary) etc.

The festival creates its own TV ads, which are screened, through a sponsorship agreement, NWS Channel 9 Adelaide. Arrangements differ each festival however two one -hour documentaries, filmed by ABC TV and SBS TV, usually screen in the months after the festival.

A massive paid print advertising campaign covering street, music and general media across Australia (e.g. Beat, Drum, Folk FRoots, Rhythms). There are minimal paid radio ads on local rasion however we receive strong editorial support from ABC and SBS Radio including Triple J, Radio National, and community radio including Radio Adelaide, 3RRR Melbourne, 2SER Sydney and more. This is just a summary – the campaign is very detailed.

Are there any obstacles encountered in organising and running the event? e.g. security / financial / attendees / enough tickets sold etc.

As with any event this size, planning, logistics and attention to detail are EVERYTHING. Given our experiences of the seven previous (very successful) festivals and the expertise and professionalism of the people who run programming / administration / finance / site / box office / marketing, we are quite proud to say that organisational hiccups are minimal.

Naturally one encounters unforeseen problems - no two festivals are identical - so we just resolve any operational issues as quickly and as smoothly as possible. Happily, selling enough tickets has never been a problem:

- 1992, as part of Adelaide Festival - 30,000 attendances
- 1993 Botanic Park - 45,000
- 1995 Botanic Park - 55,000
- 1996 WOMAD INDIAN PACIFIC (one-off event): concert train trip from Perth to concert in Pimba in SA outback plus concerts at Adelaide Festival - 8,000
- 1997 Botanic Park - 60,000
- 1998 closing event for Adelaide Festival (one-off): WOMAD IN THE VALES, concert in McLaren Vale wineries district plus concerts at Adelaide Festival, mostly in the Squeezebox venue - 8,000
- 1999 Botanic Park - 64,000
- 2001 Botanic Park – 64,000
- 2002 WOMAD Warm-Up at the Adelaide Festival Centre (a one-off special event of 3 concerts and 3 workshops) – approx 1,500
- 2003 Botanic Park – 68,000
- 2004 Botanic Park – 70,000

* note there are agreed capacity restrictions between the festival and the Liquor Licensing Commission and the Botanic Gardens management which will effectively ensure that the event does not grow too much larger.

Does WOMADelaide have any direct/ indirect competition, within Adelaide, Australia or globally? What type?

When organising a major event it's a good idea to make sure your dates don't clash with another major local event ie in the same city, particularly if it's a similar event eg a music festival. However it is a good idea if the dates can link to other festivals before or after, in the event that artists can be 'shared' ie play at both festivals and expand their Australian tour.

Similar events that happen during the year include the Melbourne International Blues Music Festival, Bellingen Global Carnival, Byron Bay Blues & Roots Festival, Pt Fairy Folk Festival and the Woodford Folk Festival however WOMADelaide is widely regarded as Australia's premier outdoor music festival and is certainly the best there is in the 'world music' vein. In 2000 as part of the Olympic Arts Festival program, Hemispheres (a world music event) was held in Sydney's Centennial Park however this was a one-off.

There is no other event exactly like WOMADelaide (in Adelaide or Australia) however globally, there are other WOMADs - they are not seen as competition. WOMAD NZ was held in New Plymouth outside Auckland 14-16 March 2003, the weekend following WOMADelaide, which enabled us to share the artist costs. WOMAD NZ happens again 11-13 March 2005. We work with other events/venues, like the Perth International Arts Festival, Port Fairy Folk Festival, the Sydney Opera House and the NZ International Festival of the Arts to tour some of the bigger-name WOMADelaide overseas artists.

Is there any opposition to the event from the local community, local businesses, or local government?

To our knowledge, there is no major opposition to WOMADelaide. Our relationship with the local residents (who live near Botanic Park) is good - we give them lots of notice of the event via letterbox drops and even offer them discounted tickets. We have Environmental Protection Authority noise limitations and deadlines to abide by. Because WOMADelaide attracts such a mixed audience - all ages, cultures - and a warm and friendly one at that, we don't encounter the hostility that, say, a one-day hard rock event – by nature a louder event, tailored to a particular age group (one that's often, unfortunately, seen as troublemaking!) – might.

HISTORY OF WOMAD

Pure enthusiasm for music from around the world led Peter Gabriel, Thomas Brooman, and Bob Hooton to the idea of WOMAD in 1980. It was founded on the basis that many others would share their enthusiasm if only they had the opportunity to listen to some of the global sounds.

The idea for WOMAD (World Of Music, Arts & Dance) evolved from an idea Gabriel had at a concert involving an African group. This then developed into a much larger event incorporating music from all over the world. Despite a considerable lack of enthusiasm from most of the music business, the team gathered together a group of people who could create an event which would present music and dance from all over the world together with rock, jazz, and folk music from the West.

The financial realities of an event of this scale meant that a one-off event was unreasonable, so the team started considering alternatives and thus the idea for a festival was born. The first festival took place in 1982 in Shepton Mallet in the UK.

WOMAD festivals are renowned for their unique mix of artists and distinctive, family-friendly atmosphere. The festivals are often weekend-long events with artists programmed on several stages. Another distinctive element of a WOMAD festival is the program for workshops; the audience is encouraged to participate in, as well as watch and appreciate the action. Equally popular is the 'global village' of stalls where you can buy food for the body and soul; music, instruments, clothes jewelry and delicious meals.

Thomas Brooman remains the Artistic Director of the organisation.

PETER GABRIEL, ARTIST AND WOMAD CO-FOUNDER

Peter Gabriel has earned a worldwide reputation for his innovative work as a musician, writer and video maker. While at school, he co-founded the group Genesis, which he left in 1975. His albums, live performances and videos since then have won him a succession of awards.

In 1980, he collected a group of people to create WOMAD (World of Music, Arts & Dance). A series of international festivals, WOMAD brings together traditional and modern music, and art and dance from every corner of the globe. Gabriel is currently an advisor on the WOMAD board, which is now based next to Real World Studios in Box, England.

Gabriel has released ten solo albums and in 1986, his seventh album "So" won him his first Grammy. The videos from this endeavour confirmed him as a leader in video awards ever, including "Sledgehammer", which has won the most music video awards ever, including a number one position in "Rolling Stones" top 100 videos of all time.

Shortly afterwards, he established Real World Studios in Wiltshire, designed as an ideal environment for performance. It also became the base for Real World Records, a label which is dedicated to recording and promoting a wide range of artists from all over the world.

In addition, Gabriel has been involved in a broad spectrum of human rights and environmental issues. His song "Biko" was the first pop song which touched on the effects of apartheid, and in 1988 and 1990 he was involved in the Nelson Mandela concerts at Wembley. He also worked with Amnesty International in 1988 to set up the "Human Rights Now!" tour, touring many countries with Sting, Bruce Springsteen, Tracey Chapman and Youssou N'Dour.

Following the Amnesty tour, he initiated the "Witness" program which was launched in 1992 in conjunction with Reebok. Its goals were to arm human rights activists from around the world with hand-held video cameras and other tools of mass communication. In 1989, he visited the USSR to help launch Greenpeace and also contributed to the "One World, One Voice" album - a collaborative project which features artists from around the globe.

In 1989, Gabriel composed the soundtrack for Martin Scorsese's epic film "The Last Temptation of Christ", which was the basis for one of his most experimental and innovative albums, "Passion". The album, which involved an extraordinary selection of musicians and vocalists, integrated several very different styles of music. A powerful concept, it provided the inspiration for the BBC's specialist radio program, "Mixing It".

1991 saw Gabriel open Real World's doors to a host of international artists and producers for a unique recording project in association with WOMAD and Real World Records. Known as "Recording Week" the aim was to make the most active and creative use of the studio's many facilities. The collaboration of musicians from different cultures produced what is known as some of the most daring and exciting work recorded.

For the release of his tenth album, "Us", in 1992, Gabriel commissioned different visual artists to interpret each of the 11 songs on the album. These works of art were featured at the British Contemporary Art exhibition in 1993 and also at a special exhibition in Japan. "Us" earned him four Grammy nominations and two MTV awards in the US, plus awards from BRIT and Q in the UK. The album's fourth single, "Kiss That Frog" was the starting point for the creation of the world's first music and motion ride, entitled "The Mindblender".

Developed in association with Mega in the US, "The Mindblender" proved to be a popular mix of ride-motion, film and music during its tour of the USA.

April 1992 was the start of the "Secret World Tour". Produced by Gabriel and pioneering Canadian director/designer Robert Le Page, the show blended Le Page's visionary style of theatre with Gabriel's personal songs focused on relationships.

It was seen by over a million fans on five continents and toured for 18 months. In November 1993, the show was filmed and recorded in Modena, Italy by Francois Girard and in August 1994 Peter Gabriel's "Secret World Live", the double live album and video, was released.

In January 1994, Gabriel launched his first CD-ROM. Entitled "Xplora 1". Despite being a relatively new technology, "Xplora" was the biggest selling music-based CD-ROM and has since been released for additional computer platforms. It won many multimedia awards across the world, including the 1994 BIMA Award, the Sparky from the interactive Media Festival and four awards at the Digital Media Awards.

In addition, Gabriel set up Real World Multimedia and gathered up a very original group of artists and technologists dedicated to developing, producing and publishing new multimedia titles that open up and explore new territory in multimedia. As well as "Radio Real World", the official web site focusing on Real World and Gabriel, 1996 saw the release of his second CD-ROM "Eve", with other multimedia products already under development.

In 2002 he released his first solo album in 10 years "Up".
